Mobile Deposit Scam

Be on the lookout for a new Mobile Deposit Scam that is making the rounds.

Scammers are contacting unsuspecting individuals, especially those who have listed items for sale using online sites. Or, they are offering low interest loans or "prize drawings". The scammer will ask if you have Remote Deposit Capture. If so, they will offer to do a "direct deposit" to your account. They will ask for the account login information so they can "take a picture of their check and deposit it to your account".

If you don't have Remote Deposit available, they will offer to set it up, "free of charge", asking you for your name, address, account number and email address. At this point the scammer has everything they need to gain access to your account.

In both instances, the scammer then deposits a fraudulent check to your account. Once the fraudulent check is deposited, they will then be able to withdraw those funds from your account based on the private information that you've previously given them. The fraudulent check that they sent to your account will eventually bounce leaving you, the account holder, responsible for covering the check. As always, please be vigilant and protect your account information!
